

NEW MUSIC THURSDAY ARCHIVE FOR 2/21/08:

- Uncrowned – Remember Your Ghost * (Album: Devils and Angels)

Review: Well...for this band Uncrowned being an unsigned band...I just don't see how that has happened. From HotLanta (Or Atlanta for the Politically Correct) Uncrowned is a new band looking to make it huge...and their first single "Remember Your Ghost" should be able to make it happen. Usually when artists aren't signed yet...it's because no one is around to help them out per say...but for this reason, it's because no one has found them yet. This song has uniqueness and originality written all over it and I think Uncrowned will make it big...once they get signed. Their EP "Devils and Angels" is available...check out myspace.com/uncrowned for more details.

- Soilwork – Exile *1/2 (Album: Sworn To A Great Divide)

Review: Here is one of these singles played mostly on Satellite and just NOW getting actual radio air play. Soilwork reminds me of Avenged Sevenfold in a sense (And yes, I'll be talking about them in a bit). Their riffs aren't the same (Except around the solo area near the end of the song), but the singer has that voice that reminds you of A7X's lead singer or even Chad Gray from Mudvayne/Hellyeah. I really love this single "Exile" and I expect this Swedish band to take over what is known now as...Death Metal! Throw up that rock fist! \m/

- Avenged Sevenfold – Afterlife  (Album: Avenged Sevenfold)

Review: How can this song NOT be song of the week for me? "Afterlife" from A7X is the song of the week for New Music Thursday. I remember back in 01/02 when I found A7X and their first album "Sounding the Seventh Trumpet"...and I said to myself..."These guys are going to be huge...and I need to listen to them more!" It has obviously come true. "Afterlife" is all original A7X...and the chorus just sounds sweet...why? It's just...different! Now, you don't wanna change anything to them, but sometimes SOME change is good. Their self-titled album is in stores right now...look for possibly another one to hit stores soon...☺

- Chiodos – Lexington * (Album: Bone Palace Ballet)

Review: What I like about my job is finding new music...and finding this one by Chiodos makes me feel good inside. Now...you're probably saying to yourself..."I've seen these guys before...they're not new Mark!" I know they're not new...this is their newest single...but Chiodos has been around for awhile. "Lexington" is a good kick-off to their new CD "Bone Palace Ballet". It has this jumpy type rock to it...basically indescribable, but that's not bad. It's a good song to get their feet wet again and I support it. As I mentioned...their new album is called "Bone Palace Ballet" and it's in stores right now. Or check out their MySpace...myspace.com/chiodos.
